Fixing Islam

By Daniel Pipes, The New York Sun

THE GLOBAL WAR ON TERROR cannot be won through counterterrorism alone; it also requires convincing the terrorists and their sympathizers that their goals and methods are faulty and failing. But how is this to be done?

By focusing on the ideological and religious sources of the violence, say I: The immediate war goal must be to destroy militant Islam and the ultimate war goal the modernization of Islam. I have not worked out the detailed implications of this policy, however.

Which explains my delight on finding that the RAND Corporation’s Cheryl Benard has done just this, publishing her results in a small book titled Civil Democratic Islam: Partners, Resources, and Strategies (available in full at RAND’s website, www.rand.org.)

Benard recognizes the awesome ambition of the effort to modernize Islam. If nation-building is a daunting task, she notes, religion-building is immeasurably more perilous and complex. This is something never tried before; we enter uncharted territory here.

Fixing Wal-Mart?

By Zola Levitt

The news media, stuck with the daily chore of entertaining their audience, often distort the news. Violence in Israel is a signature favorite. The purported sins of President Bush, bogus flu epidemics, supposed discrimination against Muslims in America, the superiority of organic foods, and lately, the offenses of Wal-Mart, have all been staples.

The magazine National Review dealt with the Wal-Mart yarn in its April 19th issue. “... Wal-Mart is a bracing historic enterprise.” As Larry Kudlow, the economist, TV personality and enthusiast for capitalism, says, “They have invented the modern company. They are really the first internetized, globalized company... They are the model for everyone else.”

Like other analysts, Benard finds that in relation to their religion, Muslims divide into four groups: First are the Fundamentalists, who, in turn, split into two. Radicals (like the Taliban) are ready to resort to violence in an attempt to create a totalitarian order. Scripturalists (like the Saudi monarchy) are more rooted in a religious establishment and less prone to rely on violence.

Second, Traditionalists, who also split into two. Conservatives (like Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani in Iraq) seek to preserve orthodox norms and old fashioned behavior as best they can. Reformists (like the Kuwaiti rulers) have the same traditional goals, but are more flexible in details and more innovative in achieving them.

Third, Modernists (like Muammar Gadhafi of Libya) assume that Islam is compatible with modernity and then work backwards to prove this point.

Fourth, Secularists, who again split into two. The mainstream (like Atatürkists in Turkey) respects religion as a private affair but permits it no role in the public arena. Radicals (like communists) see religion as bogus and reject it entirely.

The author brings these viewpoints to life in a smart, convincing presentation, showing their differences on everything from establishing the pure Islamic state to husbands having rights to beat their wives. She rightly dwells on values and lifestyles, finding dissimulation about polygamy far less commonplace than about the use of violence.

Which of these groups is most suitable to ally with? Modernists, says Benard, are “most congenial to the values and the spirit of modern democratic society.” Fundamentalists are the enemy, for they “oppose us and we oppose them.” Traditionalists have potentially useful democratic elements, but generally share too much with the fundamentalists to be relied upon.

Secularists are too often anti-Western to fix Islam.

Benard then proposes a strategy for religion-building with several prongs:

First, delegitimize the immorality and hypocrisy of fundamentalists. Encourage investigative reporting into the corruption of their leaders. Criticize the flaws of traditionalism, especially its promoting backwardness.

Second, support the modernists first and support secularists on a case-by-case basis. Back the traditionalists tactically against the fundamentalists. Consistently oppose the fundamentalists.

Third, assertively promote the values of Western democratic modernity. Encourage secular civic and cultural institutions. Focus on the next generation. Provide aid to states, groups and individuals with the right attitudes.

It all sounds very good, but political solutions don't always fix spiritual problems. Islamic fundamentalists in Arab nations control the rest of their societies. The Palestinians are an example where three quarters of them say Israelis should be killed even if there is a two state solution. This is a problem of a spiritual nature.

Secular people call it craziness, but Biblical people realize it is demonic, or in the president's term, evil. The solutions above sound effective in a worldly way, but I don't think they will work.

Ultimately we are headed toward Armageddon, which amounts to a spiritual solution to a political problem. — Zola

Abdel-Aziz al Rantisi

(d. 2004)

By Patrick Cox,
Contributing Editor

On the morning of April 17th, a 20-year-old Israeli policeman was manning the Erez border outpost used by Palestinians who cross from Gaza to work in the adjacent industrial zone. Though his post had been attacked four times in past months by terrorists intent on keeping Palestinians away from jobs in Israel, Corporal Erez Ohayun exhibited his usual cheerfulness as he processed Arabs through the facility.

One of those earlier attacks had attracted particular attention as it was perpetrated by a young Arab mother of two. Afterwards, her neighbors explained that she had been caught in an extramarital affair with a member of the Hamas terrorist group and forced to choose between fates worked out by her male relatives and Hamas leadership. She could either die at the hands of her own family in an “honor killing” or blow herself up on a suicide mission for the group her lover worked for. She chose the latter, earning the annuity paid to families of suicide bombers rather than public vilification and shame. She took four Israelis with her.

On the morning of April 17th, however, it was a young Palestinian man who passed through the first Erez checkpoint after lifting his shirt to prove he wasn't wearing the lethal vest common to his ilk. The Israel Defense Forces speculate that he may have been wearing the explosives strapped around his thighs. Approaching Corporal Ohayun, he detonated the bomb, killing the Israeli policeman and wounding three others.

Credit for his murder was publicly claimed by Hamas, in conjunction with Palestinian Authority Chairman Yasser Arafat's Fatah group. A few hours later, an Israeli helicopter fired a missile at the car used by Rantisi, who had only recently taken the helm of Hamas from founder Sheik Ahmed Yassin. A member of Hamas from its inception, Rantisi had run the wing of the group that actually carried out the terrorist attacks that have killed at least 377 Israelis. He stepped easily into Yassin's shoes — swearing to continue attacks on Israeli civilians and never to accept a Palestinian state unless it totally replaced the nation of Israel. As head of Hamas, he had approved the attack on the Erez border crossing earlier that morning. A little more than a month earlier, he had ordered the twin bombings at the Ashdod port, and his organization had proudly claimed responsibility for killing 10 Israelis in that attack.

For weeks, Rantisi had appeared mostly in public surrounded by children, knowing that the Israelis would never kill him if it meant endangering innocent Palestinian children.

In contrast, Rantisi frequently and specifically targeted for death Jewish children and babies.

International condemnation came instantly from all the same sources that had vilified Israel for the targeted assassination of Yassin. The leaders of the UN, the EU, Arab, Asian, and European nations expressed their outrage over the death of Rantisi — a man openly devoted to killing as many Jews as possible and preventing even a ceasefire with Israel.

Not one word from any of these leaders was spoken in condemnation of the murder of the young Israeli, Erez Ohayun, or the Palestinian terror leader who had ordered his death that same day — Abdel-Aziz al Rantisi. ★

Brink Lindsey, the Cato Institute trade guru, calls Wal-Mart “an agent of dynamism,” meaning naturally that “others have an interest in demonizing them.” Furthermore, “Wal-Mart is a distinct American phenomenon, and therefore an anti-European phenomenon.”

If you read the above commentary and substitute the name Israel for Wal-Mart, you will have a true and intelligent understanding of what the media is doing to Israel and why. This American-style democracy of Israel, detested by Europe, is also the “model for everyone else” and “an agent of dynamism.”

God's will would be that we all love Israel, but at least we should stop being so envious of that blessed nation. At a minimum, if we cannot love what God loves, let's not hate it.

This Is Israel! Videocassettes

Zola and his crew got tired of waiting 20 years for CNN and the other networks to show Israel as the modern, beautiful country it really is. They decided to do it themselves. Viewers will be as surprised as our pilgrims are to see that this much criticized nation is at least the equal of our own, and in some ways, superior! 12 TV programs on three videocassettes. Please order from page 15.

A Place of Birth

Zola teaches from the Kibbutz Ramat Rachel in Jerusalem, which overlooks Bethlehem. He relates the history of Bethlehem from Biblical times through today, including the controversial construction at Har Homa.

A Place of New Life

We go to the baptismal site on the banks of the Jordan River. Zola recalls his own baptism there, and we see Russian immigrants being baptized.

A Place of Opportunity

Zola tells us the history of Tel Aviv, the business center of Israel. We also visit a site in nearby Jaffa where Arab and Jewish children regularly come together to play in peace.

A Place Among Nations

Tom McCall, our senior theologian and author, tells us of the historical significance of the port city of Akko, known in the Bible as Acre. We hear from Israel's Minister of Tourism and also from David Bar-Illan, former editor of The Jerusalem Post.

A Place of Blessing

Zola recounts the many artistic achievements made by the Jewish people. We hear from a scientist who uses DNA to find those who are direct descendants of Aaron and the High Priests. Finally, Zola interviews the then mayor of Jerusalem, Ehud Olmert.

A Place of Healing

From the Dead Sea, Zola tells how these waters are used by many for healing. He interviews the spa manager at a Dead Sea resort hotel.

A Place of Revelation

Tom McCall gives us the history of Caesarea Philippi, now called Banias, including some of the ideas the Messiah taught here.

A Voice to the Nations

From Jaffa, the ancient seaport south of Tel Aviv, Zola tells us how David, Jonah and Peter visited here.

A Place to Call Home

Zola explains the spiritual significance of Caesarea, which is a jewel in the crown of Israel.

A Place of Peace

Along the shores of the Sea of Galilee, Tom McCall reviews the Biblical significance of the area, as well as its importance to the modern nation of Israel.

A Place of Still Waters

From a vantage point overlooking the waterfalls of En Gedi, Zola recalls the streams in the desert mentioned by Isaiah and explains the importance of water to this arid region.

A Place for the King

Zola reviews Jerusalem's history from the beautiful YMCA building. We hear from a city official and the mayor about the modern city of Jerusalem and its issues.

“PASSION” OK'd by Egypt

By Nadia Abou El-Magd, Associated Press

Hanan Nsour, a veiled, 21-year-old Muslim in Jordan, came out of The Passion of the Christ in tears and pronounced her verdict: Mel Gibson's crucifixion epic “unmasked the Jews' lies and I hope that everybody, everywhere, turns against the Jews.”

In the Arab world, openly voiced anti-Semitism, and by extension, the warm reception for The Passion, is bound up in the Arab conflict with Israel. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, after watching the film at his compound in the West Bank, was quoted by an aide as likening Jesus' suffering to the Palestinians'.

The Passion was OK'd by Egypt's censors with no changes.

Kuwait bans any movies depicting any of the prophets recognized by Islam, but one of its top Shiite clerics, Ayatollah Mohammed Baqer al-Mehri, has urged an exception for The Passion because it “reveals crimes committed by Jews against Christ.” The government has not yet made a decision on his call.

In Jordan, a leader of the hard-line Islamic Action Front says Muslims should read the Koran or pray instead of watching movies, but he doesn't mind The Passion being screened in his country.

Part of the film is spoken in Aramaic, an ancient language still spoken by a small minority in Syria.

Salim Abraham, 37, a Christian journalist who speaks fluent Aramaic, said: “I was so very happy to see my language, for the first time ever, being spoken on the big screen and in such a powerful movie. I think there is nothing anti-Semitic in it,” Abraham added. “It gives the facts as they are, though they may be slightly exaggerated in some instances.”

“Every Inch of this Promised Land”

The Prophet Ezekiel said that no Jewish Leader is permitted to relinquish the inheritance of the entire Jewish People (Ezekiel 46:18).

The inheritance of the Jewish People is not Sharon's or Netanyahu's to give away. Every inch of this Promised Land belongs to the descendants of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that is, the entire Jewish People, whether living in Israel or outside of the Holy Land.

The Jewish People desperately need to cast off the yoke of secular leadership, and return to their basic faith and belief in the One God of this Universe. Their faith in the Promised Land as a Holy Land must be restored. The glory and pride in being Jewish, that once existed for the Jewish People during the days of the Psalmist King David, can and must reign in the reborn Land of Israel. We first must rid ourselves from secular leadership, and restore God and His Prophets to their rightful place in our everyday life. — Ruth and Nadia Matar, Women in Green

Muslims Publish Jesus Ad

WorldNetDaily.com

A controversial Islamic lobby group has published an ad in California newspapers seeking to win acceptance with the message that Muslims “respect and revere Jesus” as do Christians.

The ad by the Southern California office of the Council on American-Islamic Relations, or CAIR, is headlined “More In Common Than You Think,” with a photograph of the old city of Jerusalem.

CAIR has launched an advertising campaign called “Islam in America,” which in the wake of tensions resulting from the 9/11 terrorist attacks, aims to dispel stereotypes and portray Muslims as ordinary citizens who love their country.

ZOLA'S BULLETIN BOARD

Stop the Presses!

We believe that mailing two 16-page Levitt Letters per month will serve you better than one 32-pager. The postage will increase, but the news should be more timely than when we must "stop the presses" to update various coverage. Our other monthly newsletter, which goes in a windowed envelope, is more effective for fundraising but less functional for teaching. We have yet to begin breaking even on our new Thursday morning broadcasts on the PAX TV network, so we ask that you stay with us, and hope that you appreciate this step to furnish more timely teaching.

We Accept Gifts in Kind

Sometimes it is more convenient to contribute cars, stock, land, and fine jewelry to tax-exempt organizations than it is to sell them. When required, we are happy to furnish an appraisal to go with IRS Form 8283. Please direct any questions in this regard to Mark's attention at our P.O. Box. Thanks.

Car Wrecks Beat Terrorists

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration reports that the U.S. had 43,220 traffic deaths in 2003. The Jerusalem Report indicates that since 1948, 21,600 Israelis have died in wars and security-related incidents, while 22,700 have died on its roads. It is old news to The Association for Safe International Road Travel, www.asirt.org, that automobile collisions are nine times the risk factor of terrorism and disease combined. And, of course, tour passengers in motor coaches are much safer than people in cars. So, if you're afraid to travel to Israel, never ride in a car.

Dear Friends:

I've always said that each tour of Israel teaches me something new. Below are some things I recently learned.

Faisal Husseini, who was Arafat's man for Jerusalem a few years ago, was similar to Hanan Ashrawi — full of lies. One of the things he claimed was that the Jews had taken a mosque in Jaffa and turned it into a nightclub.

I finally tracked it down on my last visit to Israel. What had happened was that when the Turks were in Israel before 1917, they had built a public bathhouse and, tongue in cheek, they built it to look like a mosque. In the same manner that a seafood store might be built like a ship, or a Mexican restaurant like a sombrero, this place was built to resemble a mosque.

When the Israelis took over Jaffa, the building had been abandoned and someone thought it looked novel and built a nightclub in it. But it never had been a mosque — only a Turkish bath.

It took me some ten years to track this one down. Some Palestinian lies take longer to investigate than do others.

Without Israel's assistance, the Palestinian government would be like that of Sudan or any of the other lunatic dictatorships in the Middle East. We never stop to give credit for the fact that Arafat doesn't rule and torment millions of people and put his enemies in mass graves (he clandestinely murders them one at a time), simply because the Israelis are there, standing on the streets with guns. This is not a war in Israel, but rather the attempt to control a bunch of thugs by a legitimate democracy, Israel.

It has occurred to me that envy of the US (as by Europe and other nations) is very similar to envy of Israel by the

A Note From Zola

Arabs, the Europeans, the Russians, the UN, etc. It is a deep-seated jealousy of success.

I have traveled the whole world and found that the best country is Israel, and the worst, France. I was treated with more respect in Gorbachev's Russia than in France. Our own country would be the best if the US government would be more forthcoming and the media would tell us the truth. In Israel, the government is much more clear and understandable than is ours, and the media tend to cover all views.

Israel happens to be a very progressive and advanced nation. In many hotels in Israel, when you enter the room, all the electronics are activated by the door key. When you leave a room, all the lamps or other appliances that are in use deactivate when you take your key out of the lock.

No one in their right mind speeds in Israel because there are electronic boxes that mail you citations.

There's a new road in Israel, a tollway, Route 6, but it has no tollbooths. I asked about this and was told there are electronic devices on telephone poles, which track cars, and the bill is then sent. I told this person we had tollbooths and paid in coins and dollars. She looked at me like, "Well, how is life in the 19th century?"

"Israel happens to be a very progressive and advanced nation."

While in Israel, between tour stops, I got in a round of golf. (If you want to be able to say you played golf in the Holy Land, ask about our Golfer's Paradise Extension on our November tour.) At the counter I told them I didn't know if I had time to play 9 holes or 18. The gentleman behind the counter said, "So, you will play, and you come in and pay after, according to what you played." I have played golf everywhere I possibly could, in America and overseas, and I have never heard of this happening.

Everywhere we go in Israel, we see, rather than tourists, classes of children. What are they doing? They're studying history. They go out of the school and walk to the history of four thousand years. Our schools have history in books; the Israelis have it on the streets.

Tel Aviv has skyscrapers similar to any large American city. You have to take a trip to Israel to see them because no US news agency will ever take a picture of one and show it to you. Israel has been characterized as a one-horse village with shooting in the streets, and it won't do to have a long line of steel and glass skyscrapers in a picture.

It breaks my heart that more people just won't travel to Israel and see it

No Interest

Dear Zola:

I have heard you state that you have no interest in American politics, and I was wondering why that is. With laws that have been passed over the past twenty years alone, which have systematically taken away the rights of every Christian American, I'm wondering (without any judgment) why you wouldn't take an active interest in American politics. Is it because these things have to all happen before Christ's return?

...With everything being turned upside down in this country, and only getting worse, how can you not be concerned with American politics?

Thank you.

— C.C.

Dear C.C.:

I can't say that I have "no interest in American politics," but I know that when the Lord comes for us, our country, as wonderful as it is, will be a thing of the past. In view of the fact that His coming could be tonight, tomorrow night or sometime soon, I have to turn my attention to the Holy Land, which I know will exist for at least a thousand more years! And considering that we will be living eternally in the New Jerusalem, our adopted hometown will last "forever"! (See Revelation 21.) — Zola

Hard to Believe

Dear Zola:

First I want to say that my wife and I have enjoyed learning from you much about Jewish Christians, and, in particular, the detailed explanations about the prophecies and their relation to the Life of Christ and the Christian Church. Your talents are vast and great. If we ever will go to Israel, we would want to go on your tour, and would have already gone if there would be less danger to go to Israel. We understand you say there is less danger there than in America, but that is very hard to believe. We support your ministry and receive your newsletter and provide donations from time to time.

There are two things we cannot understand, however.

President Bush is a dedicated Christian and probably

Letters to

supports Israel more than any Democrat president has in the past 30 years. Why do you not support our president? My wife and I agree completely that God has promised the Land of Israel to the Jews and we believe that is the way it should be, but the president of the USA must deal with ALL of the countries and it would be a disaster if he would not try to balance the balls that are in the air with the Arab Nations...

Secondly: WHY do the Israeli Jews discriminate against Christians in Israel as they do? Why cannot Christians openly worship in Israel and have churches like Americans allow the Jews to have here without discrimination? In my view, the Jews discriminate against all other religions much more than do the Christians...

I know you will not answer this as you are very busy, but I just had to get this off my chest as I believe in open truthfulness and like others to also.

— V.H.

Dear V.H.:

Since you believe in "open truthfulness," let me straighten you out on a few things. You may like to think that America is less dangerous than Israel, but that is just not the fact of the matter. Any large American city by itself has more murders than the entire nation of Israel in any year, including terrorism.

Why do you think I do not always support our president? Obviously, he is doing well by Israel, but one of those balls in the air has to do with his favoring a Palestinian state. I don't believe any right thinking person anywhere would agree with that. Jews do not discriminate against Christians in Israel. Churches flourish in that land. Personally, I've never known Jewish people to discriminate against other religions. That would be against Jewish tradition and law.

And lastly, you are wrong too about me not answering you. I found your letter interesting and provocative, but I must counsel you to get better information. Thanks for your compliments and stay tuned. — Zola

$1,000,000 per Hour!

Dearest Zola & Sandra:

Thank you both so much for coming to Beth Messiah Congregation today. I was SO blessed! You opened up the Scriptures (again) in such a way that I was amazed!! I am the one who asked the question about the Druze and access to the Temple Mount by Jews. I was sitting next to a man who (even though he knew the Scriptures and could hear them being read) WANTED to follow along in my Bible with me. You can't imagine how wonderful that was for me. (Rabbi Elliot asked me if I was a Zola "groupie" — I guess I am — at least when I know you are coming to Columbus and I can get to where you are speaking.)

That was the first time I had been to the Beth Messiah and I was really fascinated and blessed by the experience. Getting there late put me up front and I wasn't able to see the words to be able to sing along. I really appreciated it when you blessed us in Hebrew. It felt really special. I noticed that you had no difficulty singing along with everyone — I guess I am the jealous one that couldn't do it. (Someone once mentioned — maybe it was Perry Stone on his program "Manifest" — that Hebrew was probably the original language of Adam. It will be interesting to find that out when we get to heaven.)

I really LOVED it when you told us about speaking with the Rabbi in Israel concerning the First Fruits Festival. That really was interesting to me. What I saw in the Scriptures when you were explaining was that it was another "set up" by the Lord concerning His rising on Sunday morning. It just seemed to jump out at me saying, "I knew what I was going to do and I knew that the Church would celebrate their Sabbath on Sunday".

It doesn't matter which day is used to celebrate the gathering together of God's people. I know that, but it was still very interesting to me. I wanted to ask someone about the celebration of Resurrection Morning, but didn't get the chance. I have asked those who are 7th Day Adventists what they did about celebrating Resurrection Morning, but never really got a straight answer from them. (I have inquired and studied about them and I know their history and they have some strange ideas that do not make much sense to me anyway.)

I sure wish you could have stayed and answered everyone's questions but I know it would have gone on and on and on and you might never see Texas again. It seems like to me, that whenever you speak or whenever you teach on your programs (and even in your newsletters) that you speak plainly and in easy to understand language. It seems so simple to me and I don't understand why people just don't get it. I wish our government would hire you as a consultant (for a MILLION dollars an hour) and get some straight talk on what they are dealing with. I think it would only take you an hour or two to explain the truth to them. It would be hard to imagine where the US could go wrong in bringing Jesus to the world if they would only LISTEN! I keep wondering how our president (who is a born-again Christian) is unable to see more clearly the reality of dealing with maniacs. Our military was swift in dealing with the suicidal Japanese during WW2.

You talked about the "falling away" and I can see that happening in the US dramatically. The gentleman sitting next to me asked you the question concerning the US in end-times prophecy. I agree with you wholeheartedly!

Well, your staff has probably had severe eyestrain reading all this, but I just had to let you know how happy I was to see and hear you today.

MAY THE LORD BLESS YOU AND KEEP YOU SAFE ALWAYS.

HOPE YOU HAVE A MOST EXCELLENT AND BLESSED RESURRECTION DAY!!!!

for what it is. At the risk of repeating myself, I have guided 78 consecutive tours in over thirty years and never sustained so much as a stubbed finger. Yes, there is unrest, and there is unrest in your town too. You know what to avoid where you live and we know what to avoid over there. Ten thousand pilgrims have come with me and they have not seen a split second of violence.

With all that said, consider joining our June Kibbutz tour. We'll be staying at an authentic Israeli Kibbutz, will tour key Biblical sites, and even do some exploring for historic treasure at a real archaeological "dig". We depart from New York's Kennedy Airport on Sunday, June 6, and return on Wednesday, June 16.

I'm also hoping you'll join us in Eureka Springs, Arkansas, July 10-11 where you can experience the moving performance of The Great Passion Play, portraying the final week in the life of Christ. We will also travel back in time on the "New Holy Land" tour, in a depiction of such significant places as the Upper Room, the Sea of Galilee, the Manger in Bethlehem, and much more.

In closing, I want to again ask you to continue to pray for the peace of Jerusalem.

The Jesus ad, quoting from Islam's book, the Koran, reads:

"Behold (O Mary!)" The Angel said, 'God has chosen you, and purified you, and chosen you above the women of all nations. O Mary, God gives you good news of a word from Him, whose name shall be the Christ (Masih or Messiah), Jesus son of Mary, honored in this world and in the hereafter, and one of those brought near to God.' (Holy Koran, 3:45)

"Like Christians, Muslims respect and revere Jesus. Islam teaches that Jesus is one of the greatest of God's prophets and messengers to humankind.

"Like Christians, every day, over 1.3 billion Muslims strive to live by his teachings of love, peace, and forgiveness. Those teachings, which have become universal values, remind us that all of us, Christians, Muslims, Jews, and all others have more in common than we think."

Muslims point out, however, that they reject Christian belief in Jesus' divinity and regard him only as a prophet.

Muhammed, in fact, is considered by Muslims to be superior to Jesus because Islam's founder is believed to have brought God's final revelation.

CAIR claims to be a civil rights group that represents mainstream Muslims in the US, but the group is a spin-off of the Islamic Association for Palestine, labeled a "front group" for the terrorist organization Hamas by two former heads of the FBI's counterterrorism section.

CAIR issued a condemnation of Israel's assassination of Hamas leader Sheik Ahmed Yassin that made no mention of Hamas' or Yassin's responsibility for countless terrorist attacks against Israel, which were part of his stated objective to destroy Jews and the Jewish nation.

"We, the Undersigned..." From www.nyuinvestinpeace.com

We, the undersigned, support peace in the Middle East and oppose the misguided petition calling for New York University to divest from companies conducting business in the State of Israel.

We have diverse opinions on how peace in the Middle East can be achieved and widely differing views of the Israeli government's policies. We are unanimous, however, in our condemnation of the divestment campaign as a partisan attack attempting to suppress, rather than encourage, discussion of the issues.

The divestment petition makes no mention of the widespread desire within Israel for a long-term and honorable solution. It also fails to include previous attempts to achieve a peaceful resolution with the country's Arab neighbors and the Palestinian Authority. Instead, it pours scorn on Israel and calls for abandonment and disengagement. To place blame solely on Israel for the state of affairs in the Middle East is unjust and demonstrates an unwillingness to engage in dialogue.

We denounce campaigns filled with rhetoric long discredited by its use among extremists as code for the destruction of Israel. Rather, we encourage individuals to work towards peaceful solutions through honest discussion.

We therefore denounce the divestment petition and appeal to those who signed it to reconsider. Please join us in our campaign to encourage discussion and debate at NYU. ■

Another Wall

By Raymond Colitt, Financial Times

Walls have been used throughout history when an opposing force becomes violent. The Dutch in early NYC built walls to control marauding native Americans. The United States has built walls along the Mexican border not even because of violence, but merely to try to control immigration. The story below covers another such wall. Israel's fence is certainly nothing new, it is just politically incorrect. — Zola

The government of Rio de Janeiro state has proposed to build a wall around its sprawling favelas (slum quarters) in an effort to help control rampant crime in the picture postcard city.

The proposal comes after yet another wave of violence in the city during the Easter holidays, shutting down commerce, and killing 10 people, including civilians, police and gang members. More than 1,200 police officials occupied Rocinha and Vidigal, two slums in southern Rio de Janeiro.

The unrest broke out when a rival gang sought to invade and occupy the larger shantytown, in an attempt to control the drug trade and steal cars. Drug gangs armed with grenades and machine guns fired relentlessly and local residents were caught in the crossfire.

The state government proposes to build three-meter tall concrete walls around at least four slums. "We can no longer watch passively, it needs to be built urgently," said a government official. He rejected criticism that the project would in effect segregate residents. ★

Great Moments in Canadian Justice

By James Taranto, OpinionJournal.com

Islamists in Canada have recently set up an Islamic Institute of Civil Justice to oversee tribunals that would arbitrate family disputes and other civil matters between people of Muslim origin on the basis of the Islamic Sharia law. This is the first time in any western country that the medieval precepts of the Sharia have been given any validity.

Well, suffice it to say that Sharia law does not look kindly on homosexuality. Here's what happened when the Taliban faced the question of what to do with two men who turned out gay:

The Taliban's Islamic jurists knew that homosexuality was reprehensible and the sentence should be execution, but they were genuinely puzzled by conflicting Islamic opinion on exactly how the execution should be carried out.

"We have a dilemma on this," one Taliban leader explained. "One group of scholars believes you should take these people to the top of the highest building in the city, and hurl them to their deaths. (The other) believes in a different approach. They recommend you dig a pit near a wall somewhere, put these people in it, then topple the wall so that they are buried alive."

Isn't there a happy medium between being intolerant and declaring that anything goes? Canada seems to be erring on both sides at once. ★

Muhammed Crazy Horse?

By George Archibald, The Washington Times

An Indian tribe has forced distributors of an Arab studies guide for U.S. teachers to remove an inaccurate passage that says Muslim explorers preceded Christopher Columbus to North America and became Algonquin chiefs.

Peter DiGangi, director of Canada's Algonquin Nation Secretariat in Quebec, called claims in the book, The Arab World Studies Notebook, "preposterous" and "outlandish," saying nothing in the tribe's written or oral history support them.

The 540-page book says the Muslim explorers married into the Algonquin tribe, resulting in 17th-century tribal chiefs named Abdul-Rahim and Abdallah Ibn Malik.

U.S. vs. U.S.

WorldNetDaily.com

Galal Amin

There is “no conclusive proof” that Arabs and Muslims were behind the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks, and the U.S. itself may be responsible, asserts an Egyptian professor at American University of Cairo.

The charge by Galal Amin, a professor of economics, came in reaction to the U.S. administration’s Greater Middle East Initiative. In an article in Al-Ahram Weekly entitled “Colonial Echoes,” Amin complains of the U.S. initiative’s assessment of the Arab world, which cites an adult illiteracy rate of 40 percent and a combined GDP of Arab League members that is less than Spain’s. The U.S. conclusion is that these problems present an opportunity for the international community, but Amin insists this is a “bundle of nonsense” and asks, “What business do you have interfering in our affairs? Have we complained to you about our democracy, knowledge and women, and asked for help?”

The professor contends there is no “conclusive proof” that Arabs and Muslims were involved and says many American, European and Arab writers “suspect that the attacks were carried out by Americans, or with American assistance, or that Americans knew about them and kept silent.”

“Such doubts are strong and rest on damning evidence,” Amin writes, “but the U.S. administration forcefully censors them and bans any discussion of the matter — something that, by the way makes one suspect the US administration’s commitment to ‘knowledge’”. Amin does not provide any of that “evidence.”

Addressing the issue of lack of knowledge, he asks, “What do you have to say about the young Arab men who you say piloted the planes that crashed into the Twin Towers and the Pentagon? Weren’t they well educated, with enough technical sophistication to commandeer commercial planes?”

Regarding women, he writes, “What do you have to say of the Palestinian girls and women — people who you definitely regard as terrorists — who blew themselves to pieces in protest against the usurpation of their national rights, hoping their sacrifice may bring back Palestine?”

“Most of these women were educated, independently minded and loaded with confidence,” Amin claims. “Yet you would see their actions as high terror. So women’s empowerment is not sufficient to eliminate terror.”

The true cause of terror, he claims, is Arab relations with the U.S. and the U.S. position on the Palestinian issue. Therefore, he asserted, the Greater Middle East Initiative’s insistence on a greater role by the U.S. is likely to “increase, rather than temper, the region’s inclination for terror.”

A faster and more effective way to eliminate terror, he said, would be to get rid of “counterterror, of the type Israel practices in Palestine and the U.S. in Iraq.” ✪

Beware of My Toothbrush?

After 9/11, our airline security people consulted behind the scenes with El-Al, the world’s safest airline, and the one we use for our tours. The El-Al security officer told them that US equipment is alright, but we would have to make significant improvements in personnel. The Levitt Letter has said this for 20 years now (not just since Sept. 11th). The Israelis have very competent people who can ferret out those with a secret. The El-Al officer commented, “Your airport security people are looking for scissors and nail clippers. Ours are looking for terrorists.”

I really had our security deficiency demonstrated when I passed through an airport security point and they flagged my bag. The lady asked, “May I open it?” They looked and looked through the bag, trying to find whatever had bothered the woman running the X-ray machine. I finally pointed to my bathroom kit which was in a transparent bag and said, “It has an electric toothbrush — that long plastic thing. It probably has electronics inside and that may be what caused the alarm.”

So the inspector said, “I’ll hand you the kit and we’ll see if your bag passes without it.” It did. Everyone was happy. So I tossed the kit into the bag and was on my way. The only detail was that the inspector’s job was to find out what that white plastic tube was. No one ever bothered to check on it. All we’d done was agreed that the long plastic thing had been flagged as a possible weapon. It wasn’t. But it might have been.

If we use people who cannot distinguish between simply getting a bag to go through and really finding a weapon, we are not doing security at all. We are in for another major attack. And as far as I can see, we have barely made progress. We simply have to take seriously the fact that the Muslims intend to occupy our country. Terrorism is one of the steps they take in this direction, and lack of security promotes terrorism. — Zola

97.6 Percent Anti-Israel

By Patrick Goodenough, CNSNews.com

The Press Council, a self-regulatory body of Australia's print media, was asked to adjudicate on two headlines in The Australian last year. A story about bomb attacks in Istanbul last November was headlined "Muslims Kill 27 to 'Stop Oppression.'" A reader complained that the use of the word "Muslim" rather than "terrorists" was inappropriate, and part of a "political agenda."

The newspaper responded by saying the headline was accurate and fair, pointing out that the groups which claimed responsibility comprised Muslims whose aims included the setting up of an Islamic state, and to "stop the oppression of Muslims."

The Press Council accepted The Australian's argument that it did not intend to brand all Muslims, but upheld the complaint, judging that "many readers would see the headline as too all-encompassing to be fair."

A second complaint, brought by a group called the Forum on Australia's Islamic Relations (FAIR), dealt with a headline "Islamic Terror Kills Peace in Baghdad and Jerusalem," about suicide bombings in the Iraqi and Israeli capitals.

FAIR said the use of the word Islamic was offensive, unfair and a "gratuitous slander against the meaning of Islam, which is peace." But the Press Council said that its use "accurately reflected both the operational method and the fundamentalist religious motivation of the bombers," and dismissed the complaint.

The watchdog cautioned that "Terrorists may be Muslims, but Muslims are not automatically terrorists."

FAIR's founder, Turkish-born journalist Kuranda Seyit, said he was dismayed by the Press Council decision to dismiss his group's complaint. Islam and terror were "diametrically opposed ideas," he said, arguing that media would never consider using the name of another religion as an adjective for terrorism.

Seyit said that while he would not approve if media began referring to "Christian terrorism" or "Jewish terrorism," it would at least show a consistency which he now believed to be missing.

Some scholars and writers use the term "Islamist" to describe violent Muslim groups and individuals, in a bid to differentiate radicals from the mainstream.

But Seyit rejected the word, saying it was a meaningless "Western construct," which also linked terrorism with Islam. The recent actions of a cleric claiming to be the country's senior Muslim leader or mufti, Sheik Taj al-Din al-Hilali, have focused renewed attention in Australia onto the issue of Islam and terrorism. During a visit to Lebanon, Hilali gave a speech at a mosque seen to support suicide bombers and a "holy war" against Israel, and calling the 9/11 attacks the work of Allah against "infidels" or "oppressors." He later said his words had been misinterpreted, although the speech was translated by official interpreters at the Australian embassy in Beirut.

Muslim organizations have not publicly repudiated Hilali, although the Islamic Council in the state of Victoria has questioned his status, saying the mufti title was merely an honorary one.

In March, journalist Peter Manning released a study critical of the Australian media's depiction of Muslims since 9/11, based on reports carried by two major Sydney newspapers, The Sydney Morning Herald and The Daily Telegraph. The charges were countered by Ted Lapkin, a policy analyst for the Australia-Israel and Jewish Affairs Council, who said that his organization had long monitored an anti-Israeli bias in the two papers.

He cited the use of terms such as "hard-line" to describe any Israeli in the center or right of center, while at the same time a reticence to describe groups like Hamas and Islamic Jihad as "terrorists." Lapkin also called Manning's own objectivity into question, saying the journalist's views on the Middle East situation were "far out of the mainstream" and strongly pro-Palestinian.

Late last year, a group of professionals released a report on the coverage by another major Australian daily, The Age, of the Middle East conflict. The study found numerous instances of violations of the newspaper's own code of conduct, with bias favoring either the Israeli or Palestinian position. Of 210 violations cited, 97.6 percent were found to be anti-Israel, and 2.4 percent to be anti-Arab.

SACRED STONES The faithful cry out to the Holy One of Israel at the Western Wall. "Only God Almighty can bring peace. We must rely on God and not on politicians," said Rabbi Mordechai Eliyahu.

"Ask For Death!"

This eye-opening booklet illustrates how flagrantly, systematically and insidiously the Palestinian Authority teaches: "Ask for death, and the life will be given to you." Included you'll find a blood-chilling video-on-CD which documents the indoctrination of innocent Palestinian children to become suicide bombers. They are brainwashed to believe that it is better to blow themselves up — and thereby go to Paradise — than to live a good and peaceful life on earth. You may want to share this important CD-video and booklet with elected officials and local newscasters. Written by Itamar Marcus and published by Palestinian Media Watch. No DVD drive required!
